The 2025 UEFA Super Cup will see Paris Saint-Germain and Tottenham Hotspur battle for continental supremacy on Wednesday, August 13, at the Stadio Friuli (Bluenergy Stadium) in Udine, Italy. Kick-off is set for 21:00 CEST (20:00 BST / 15:00 ET / 12:00 PT), with global broadcasting ensuring fans won't miss a moment of the action.

How to Watch

In France, coverage will be on Canal+ .

Fans in the UK can tune in via TNT Sports, while BBC will show match highlights.

In the United States, Paramount+ and TUDN will stream the match live.

DAZN carrying it in Canada, Germany, and Portugal.

Stan Sport has rights in Australia.

Movistar+ will show it in Spain.

Italy is expected to have coverage via Sky Sport and DAZN.

Brazil: TNT Sports, SBT

Many of these broadcasters will also provide real-time updates on their social channels.

Social Media & Live Updates

For minute-by-minute commentary, AS.com will run a live blog, while TalkSPORT will provide live radio coverage in the UK. Official club accounts—@PSG_inside, @SpursOfficial—and UEFA's Game Center and social media channels will also deliver highlights, behind-the-scenes content, and match updates.

Team News – PSG

The Parisians will be without suspended midfielder João Neves, sent off in the Club World Cup final, and goalkeeper Gianluigi Donnarumma, omitted from the squad.

New signing Lucas Chevalier is set to start between the posts, while Warren Zaire-Emery could replace Neves in midfield. The rest of Luis Enrique's side is expected to feature the club's trademark attacking firepower.

Team News – Tottenham

Spurs face significant absences, with James Maddison sidelined for much of the season after an ACL injury, Dejan Kulusevski and Radu Drăgușin out, and Yves Bissouma dropped for disciplinary reasons. On the positive side, striker Dominic Solanke is fit, and full-back Destiny Udogie is pushing for a return. New recruit João Palhinha could be handed a key role in midfield.

The Stakes & the Odds

Fresh from lifting the Champions League, PSG enter as clear favourites with bookmakers pricing them at around 2/5. Tottenham, under new boss Thomas Frank, arrive as underdogs but will look to frustrate their opponents and strike on the counter. Pundits expect goals at both ends, with PSG's depth and attacking options potentially proving decisive.
